

HIGHBROW MEETS LOWBROW AT CAMERATA PACIFICA'S INAUGURAL SPEAKEASY L.A.

Saturday, October 14, 1pm - 4pm
Downtown Dance & Movement, 1144 South Hope Street

"Music sounds better with good wine, and wine tastes better with good music." – Adrian Spence, Artistic Director

Tickets start at $5 and are on sale now

(Wednesday, September 27, Los Angeles, CA) – The origins of chamber music can be traced back to a simpler time in history when House Lannister and House Stark coexisted peacefully, and chamber music was "the music of friends," central to social enjoyment and merrymaking.

Camerata Pacifica brings back the joy and pleasure of classical musical revelry with its first ever SpeakEasy L.A., Saturday, October 14, 1pm - 4pm. Nuclear Wines will join the festivities, and in keeping with today's contemporary times, there will be a super hip food truck.

So, forgo the formalities of the concert hall, and come SpeakEasy! Bring a folding chair, (you have to bring your own chair!), grab a bite, enjoy wine from a can, and get into some good music.

Whether you're a classical music aficionado, or don't know Beethoven from Beck, this is the perfect opportunity to get inside the music with the world-class musicians of Camerata Pacifica: Nicholas Daniel (oboe), Ani Aznavoorian (cello), Bridget Kibbey (harp), and Svet Stoyanov (percussion); all corralled by the Camerata Artistic Director, Adrian Spence

This SpeakEasy experience will explore four very different instruments - oboe, harp, cello & marimba - and how each instrument requires different techniques to produce its sound.

Camerata Pacifica's captivating cellist, Ani, will also give a personal tour of Inner World, an amazing piece by Australian composer Carl Vine, for cello, tape and video projection.

In addition to bringing your chair, please bring questions! You can talk with the musicians and even take out your phone and hashtag #camerataspokeeasy to your hearts delight.

Tickets begin at $5!

Don't have a chair to bring? No problem! A $40 VIP ticket not only provides you with your very own folding chair to take home, but also includes 1 can of Nuclear Wines and access to the preferred seating area. (VIP tickets must be booked by Monday, October 2nd!)

Here's the rundown of SpeakEasy ticket prices:
